	Brief description: The University of Barcelona, The University Politècnica de Catalunya, the Autonomous University of Barcelona, and the University Pompeu Fabra all members of the Association Catalan of Public Universities (ACUP) decided to continue their international relation within an Erasmus Mundus program. Their on-going cooperation as member of the ACUP,with The main objective of the ACUP is sum up the forces of the public universities of Catalonia to promote joint initiatives, programs and projects with the aim of improving the university system providing them the opportunity to further develop their links and it will represent a collaborative effort to develop a project with future collaborations, provided an infrastructure to joint efforts and create future international cooperations especially with the North American countries. These above mentioned universities decided to provide their international connections to ensure mutual cooperation and a bridge that would have the opportunity to continue in the future. Each university provided a list of North American universities to contact and join the consortium and the North American universities that joined the group aported the European universities which they have on-going cooperations, ensuring a smooth cooperation and with the aim to provide future joint programmes, agreements, etc. among all the members of the Erasmus Mundus project called Nova Domus . Nova Domus consortium aims are strongly committed to enhancing the capacity of the research universities and to contributing to a globally competitive innovation of world's economy. The consortium geographical coverage is as extend as possible at the European level; the European universities are distributed broadly across the European region, Since the consortium started from the ACUP members, there are a large amount of Catalan universities (Spanish) . however this fact can increase cooperation in pooling research methodology.
