Project Objectives:

This Erasmus Mundus Mobility with Bolivia, Argentina, Perú (BAPE) proposal addresses the question of mobility between Europe and the countries of the America Latina region on a variety of academic levels. This proposal addresses all the objectives of the call for proposals and intends to ensure a balanced emphasis on each of these objectives. The partnership already has an extensive track record in international education and cooperation that facilitates the enhancement of international cooperation and the sharing of know-how and good practice through student mobility and staff exchange.

Brief description:

The Erasmus Mundus Mobility with Bolivia, Argentina, Perú (BAPE) project brings together 20 higher education institutions (9 from Europe and 11 from Latin America), with the common purpose of pursuing the development of the concerned countries, in a global arena in which a crisis of still unknown magnitude seems to impair the goals of welfare and security already reached. The project foresees 153 individual mobility flows, of which nearly 80 % for third countries nationals (122 mobilities) and 20% for Europeans (31 mobilities). 87.58% of the total number of mobilities for target group 1 (134 of which 31 from Europe and 103 from third-countries), 6.6% of mobilities for target group 2 (10 mobilities), and 5.6 % for target group 3 (9 mobilities). Concerning flows from third countries, Mobilities at Master and Doctorate level are well represented (respectively 26 and 27 mobilities for the 3 countries) and undergraduate mobilities are implemented (45 for the 3 countries). Full Master and Doctorates will be proposed to students from all Target groups (22 months for masters, 34 for doctorates).

For Doctorate, some mobilities will last 9 months. For TG3, full mobilities have been decided for two levels (master: 22 months; doctorate: 34 months) so that students could achieve a full degree in Europe.

Concerning European mobilities, masters, doctorates, post-doctorates and academic staff mobilities have been favoured, in order to facilitate the transfer of know-how on:

- the upholding of a high level of knowledge and research (through doctorates and post-doctorates mobility)
- the implementation of trainings responding to the new skills required by the international labour market (through teaching staff mobility)
- the building of administration capacities relative to quality assurance, implementation of ECTS (through administrative staff mobility).

The partnership responds to all the priority thematic fields of the call by offering high quality, higher education opportunities in all thematic fields covered by the call.

The selection will be based on the training offered in each university and academic merits. During the selection process, special attention will be paid to the personal situation and the gender of the candidates.
