Dissemination and Exploitation of Programme results

Erasmus+ Sport- Project Coordinators’ Meeting
February 2019
What is D&E?

• Dissemination is a planned process of providing information on the results of programmes and initiatives to key actors. It occurs as and when the results of programmes and initiatives become available.

• Exploitation is:
  (a) a planned process of transferring the successful results of the programmes and initiatives to appropriate decision-makers in regulated local, regional, national or European systems, on the one hand, and
  (b) a planned process of convincing individual end-users to adopt and/or apply the results of programmes and initiatives, on the other hand.
Why is D&E important?

Key principles and objectives of the Dissemination & Exploitation Strategy:

• Transparency
• Impact
• Inspiration

The AFTERMATCH Survey

Description
The AFTERMATCH project focuses on the “dark side of the moon” of Dual Career, the situation in which athletes experience an high risk of a traumatic and unproductive exit from the sport’s world; in other words, the project pays attention to the last part of an athletes career, especially for non professional athletes or for athletes not equipped with a safe “professional parachute” during the jump into the labour market. Acting this way means to focus on ”pre-emptive exit strategy planning adoption”, on ”evaluation and raising awareness about useful sport-related soft skills”, on ”innovative exit-oriented training modules to be included in traditional federation’s paths”. This survey is a ”small scale research” containing: a) a state of art of dual career in 5 Eu countries; b) a focus on sport-related transversal / non formal skills to be effectively spent in the labour market; c) a mix of interviews and desk research with athletes and former athletes.

Helping athletes start second careers

Drawing on skills acquired during sport careers, a project helped retired athletes to move into the labour market.

Often after leaving the sport world, athletes have a hard time starting a new career, as sports skills don’t always translate into traditional jobs. The EU co-funded AFTERMATCH – Life Beyond Sport project helped athletes see how the competencies developed during their sport careers can fit a new career.

Massimo Guerra, a former Italian Serie A basketball player, said:

“I was fully aware that a sport career would not last forever. Sometimes you can hide this fact to yourself, but at a certain age you must deal with it, because sport does not make you live all you life with what you can earn.”

The project focused on athletes with high risk of traumatic or unproductive exit from the sport world, and conducted a survey across participating countries, which served as a basis for the intervention model.

The result was an innovative training tool promoting transition into a post-sport career by recognising sports-related skills. This could be applied to three targets: a) sport trainers, coaches, and managers; b) teachers and professors, and c) HR managers for public and private companies.

After implementing the tool, sport federations understood the importance of a dual career approach and coaches and other sport-related operators took on a larger role as educators, helping athletes start thinking about post-sport careers. Meanwhile, teachers and professors helped student athletes to see the link between their sport skills and academics, and fostered other skills. Employers increased their knowledge about the benefits of having employees with sport-generated skills, and hired more former athletes.
